PROVO.

County Clerk Ledwidge submitted his quarterly report which was placed on file.

The late grand jury made an investigation of the county poor farm and rendered a report rigidly scoring the court and the present management of the poor farm. Claiming that the immates were living in swful filth and that they had complained to them of the manner in which they were read to them of the manner in which they were readed.

The court appointed a committee to investigate the place and learn if the findings of the grand jury were entirely treating. The following is a report of the committee:
